

Decision Making Process – Scenario #1

It's finally here. It's the biggest party of your high school career that everybody has been talking about nonstop for months. This makes for a very exciting day at school and you can't get the wild party night thoughts out of your head. The biggest problem is that you have the biggest English test of your life the very next morning. Your mother is out of town, but before she left she told you that your best bet would be to stay in and study instead of going to the party. Those words of wisdom weren't the only things she left home with you. She also accidentally left the keys to her SUV on the kitchen counter. You know your mother would have a heart attack if she found out that you drove her car anywhere, especially because you don't have your license yet, but those keys are really enticing. The party is 10 blocks away. What will you choose to do tonight?

Step 1: List your options.

-
-
-
-
-
-

Step 2: List what's important to you.

- Values: _____
- Passions: _____
- Dreams: _____

Step 3: List the pros and cons of each option.

PROS	CONS

Step 4: List people who could give you good advice.

-
-
-

Step 5: Decide and act. (Write your decision below.)